Zooming into Focus

Jennifer McDonough,
Project Director

“When you think about your life, a big part of your life is work. That’s where where I spend more than 40 hours of my week, either at work, thinking about work, talking about work... and when we meet people in the community, typically one of the first things they say is, ‘What do you do?’ And for so many individuals with disabilities, they’ve not had that opportunity or that experience, so we are looking to change that and figure out what needs to change in order for individuals to have that experience. We hope to find out through this research.”
